

About Nanjing City

The symposium will be held in Nanjing city, capital of Jiangsu Province. It is located in the lower reaches of Yangtze River, southwest of the province. The population of its urban area is about 2.7 million. Nanjing is one of the historical and cultural cities in China. The discovery of the Nanjing Ape revealed the trace of human influence some 350,000 years ago. Nanjing bears the reputation of the Capital of Ten Dynasties. Nanjing is a place of celebrities and humanities, with a splendid cultural heritage. The attraction of Nanjing consists in the combination of rich natural and cultural heritages. It is a famous scenic tourist city, which is an integration of mountains, waters, forest, as well as monuments and historical relics. With many a relics of the Republic of China era in particular, Nanjing is recognized as the museum of modern Chinese history.

Post Symposium Tours

The boundless expanse of the Chinese territory is dotted with innumerable sights of gorgeous and varied natural scenery. Five thousand years of splendid Chinese civilization have contributed the extraordinary enchanting beauty to this poetic and picturesque land. Places of historic interest and scenic beauty across China have become tourist destinations, such as the terracotta soldiers and horses in the ancient city Xi'an, the Great Wall and the Imperial Palace in China's capital Beijing, beautiful gardens in Suzhou and Expo Park in Shanghai

There are two post-symposium tours of your choice.

Route	Cities including
A	Nanjing-Xi'an-Beijing(By flight)
B	Nanjing-Suzhou-Shanghai(By train)

Of course, you can arrange your route by yourself besides the two choices.

Theme

Low-energy manufacture and efficient utilization

Key Dates

Deadline for submitting draft papers: March 31, 2013
Review comments of draft papers: May 31, 2013
Deadline for submitting final papers: July 31, 2013
Deadline for registration: August 31, 2013

Paper Submission

You can submit the full paper and 15-minute oral presentation by email (iscc2013@gmail.com) or online at website www.iscc2013.org before July 31, 2013. The hard copy abstract and e-version symposium proceedings will be published before September 10, 2013.

Proposed Sessions

Session 1	Low-energy manufacture and chemistry of clinker <ul style="list-style-type: none">■ Chemistry of clinker formation■ Emission control■ Performance optimization■ AFR use■ Special types of clinker
Session 2	Chemistry and process of cement <ul style="list-style-type: none">■ Hydration reaction■ Physical evolution and microstructure■ Composition design with SCM■ Modeling and simulation■ Preparation and chemistry of Non-Portland cement
Session 3	Efficient utilization in concrete <ul style="list-style-type: none">■ Mineral and chemical admixtures■ Resistance to aggressive environment■ Physical characteristics and microstructure■ Service life and durability
Session 4	Testing technology and standardization <ul style="list-style-type: none">■ Nontraditional testing methods■ Exhaust monitoring and evaluation■ Cement and concrete standards
Session 5	Other technology and equipment of energy-saving and emission-reduction

Language

The official language of the symposium is English. All papers to be presented during the symposium should be in English.

Venue

The symposium venue is Jiangsu Conference Center (also named as Zhongshan Hotel).

Registration Procedures
